This is a full-time faculty position, beginning January 1, 2023 (or July 1, 2023). Salary is commensurate with experience and degree held at the time of appointment. The faculty member will teach on average 24 undergraduate credit hours an academic year, which includes preparing syllabi, teaching, and evaluating instructional outcomes of assigned courses. The faculty member will serve as a faculty advisor for students in the Business Administration program in both the School of Undergraduate Studies and the degree completion program in the School of Professional Studies. The faculty member will attend committee and faculty meetings, and maintain regular office hours. Full-time faculty are expected to pursue professional development appropriate to the field in which they are hired, in this case leadership and/or business; and be involved in church and community service opportunities.

Qualifications:

All candidates must have an earned doctorate in business, management, leadership, or a closely related academic discipline (Ph.D. or D.B.A.), teaching experience, and leadership experience. ABD will be considered.

As a full-time faculty position, the applicant must be experientially and theologically committed to the Stone-Campbell faith tradition, and in full agreement with the school's doctrinal statement.

The candidate must be able to teach across the wide breadth of business administration related disciplines and demonstrate currency on issues and trends as they relate to the leading of organizations. Examples of courses to be taught include: Organizational Behavior; Management; Business Law; Leadership, Project Management; Conflict Management; Human Resource Management; International Business; Corporate Finance.

Responsibilities:

The candidate must possess a mature Christian faith and be able to demonstrate teaching competence, scholarly ability and be knowledgeable in his/her discipline. One must be able to contribute to the well being and advancement of an academic Christian community by integrating scholarship with the community's faith tradition. The candidate must be a person of virtuous character and lifestyle who is willing to invest him/herself in the holistic development of students. The candidate must be committed to both ministerial and discipleship training in a Christian college context.

Application Process:

Send (1) a letter of application, (2) a curriculum vitae, (3) unofficial copies of all undergraduate and graduate transcripts, (4) a list of four references (three professional and one spiritual) whom the university may contact, (5) a statement of teaching philosophy that includes how the applicant has integrated or intends to integrate a biblical worldview in the teaching-learning process, and (6) a personal testimony which describes one's spiritual journey and current service within God's kingdom. All materials may be sent to Dr. Kevin W. Larsen, VP Academic Affairs, Mid-Atlantic Christian University, 715 N. Poindexter Street, Elizabeth City, NC 27909.
